

OSIS

OSIS TECHNIQUE

We transferred the effects of osmosis caused by salt onto the wood. The surface is glazed monochrome or multi-colour. Salt is spread on the wet surface in different techniques. Soon the natural process is starting. Salt has the talent to absorb liquids from its surrounding and as well to collect the pigments of the paint.

The results are affected by the kind of salt used, humidity and length of reaction time. A series of experiments shows that big crystals tend to create big rims with strong contrasts, whereas fine crumbs of the salt trigger more differentiated patterns with softer gradients. When combined with wood, the salt draws the pigment into the natural flow of the grain, emphasizing the unique features of the original material.

BRUTAL

To expand the processing possibilities of the OSIS surface material, LLOT LLOV has experimented with flexible support material and can now also implement round shapes. The OSIS sideboard BRUTAL uses formal quotations from brutalist architecture - the monumental piece of furniture has overscaled shaped parts that emphasise the detail of round undercuts in a cuboid. A geometric play becomes an elegant chest of drawers that can hide records, cutlery and crockery or even a house bar. Both the exterior and interior are made of OSIS and have been carpented into high-quality furniture by the BRUX joinery in Berlin.

COMPLETE

Executed entirely in OSIS BURNED surface, the solid table is build from a complex marquetry of OSIS veneer. Five circular veneer panels compose the tabletop, each with intentionally diverging grain directions. The result is a layered interplay of lines, surfaces and light - the table shifts its appearance with every change in viewing angle or movement through the space.

BLOCK

With the new OSIS BLOCK edition, which is inspired by the shape of various rectangular bodies and is used as coffee tables or desks, the design duo LLOT LLOV presents the new colours of the OSIS surface. Inspired by the first furniture edition of OSIS – these three tables are a further development, which present the OSIS surface very well with particularly large surfaces, as one can dive into the depths of the pattern when looking at them.

KARLA

KARLA s a piece of furniture that is as lovely as its task. It functions as a dressing and make-up table. Equipped with two drawers and a box it keeps all utensils and accessories in place. A round mirror is held in suspense by the framing that is the lengthening of the rear support. While KARLA is formally rather reserved, it shows off with its colour and pattern.

CROSS TABLE

OSIS CROSS TABLE is crafted from circular tubes that elegantly form a cross-shaped base beneath the tabletop. This design not only provides stability but also adds a visually captivating element. The table is characterized by its OSIS pattern in Dark Terrakotta pattern, which reflects a rich and earthy color scheme.

Osis Cross Table

The developmental process was first demonstrated in Tokyo. BAtoMA invited Ania Bauer and Jacob Brinck to introduce the amazing capacities of salt on wood. In 2015 LLOT LLOV showed the process of OSIS to a German audience at IMM Cologne. That same year Gallery S. Bensimon and LLOT LLOV launched a table series for the Paris gallery. Since then it has been shown at Maison et Objet in Paris, Biennale Interieur in Belgium and won the “Materialpreis” - an award for material innovation. In 2018 OSIS was shown for the first time in the US. A selection of Osis furniture has been shown at Alcova Milano in 2021 and 2022.
